BRITISH ARDOUR.

It is not surprising that a British scout ship should run into Shesapenk hay in her ardour for game; and, per haps, it was a good plan for the war department to show our mettle by or-dering one or two men of war there to see that nothing illegal happened in neutral waters. The British cruiser had a perfect

The scouts know that the Deutschland has the protection and freedom of the three-mile limit, and the Doutschland knows that she is just as legitimate prey for the allies as the Lusitania or the Tubantia were for Germany. It is a rough game and the consequences of it cannot be dodged. As Uncle Sam cannot give the word -"Go!" there is no reason why he
